History

The Morris Arboretum began in 1887 as "Compton," the summer home of Quaker brother and sister John and Lydia Morris. The Morrises shared a love of history, art, and travel – journeying throughout the world to bring ideas, artwork, and plants back to Compton. They believed strongly in education, stewardship, and preservation. In 1932, Compton became the Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania. Today, the Morris Arboretum is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is recognized as the official arboretum of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. As a world-class public garden and premier Philadelphia destination, the Morris Arboretum promotes the relationship between people, plants, and place—bringing people together to learn, grow, experience, and celebrate.
